PREPARING FOR CAMP AND PREVENTING HOMESICKNESS

Each counselor is trained to help guide your camper safely and successfully through each camp day. Also, good parent preparation can give campers the knowledge they need to fully enjoy and succeed in a camp experience.

- Set realistic camp expectations based on our information and the activities listed.
- Reinforce positive camp aspects; encourage new learning.
- Do not force a child to attend camp who has no desire to go.
- Encourage campers to enjoy their camp experience.

Purdue University will never force a camper to stay at camp who does not want to stay. The nature of our program keeps campers active and engaged in camp activities and interpersonal relationships. If, however, your child becomes homesick:

- Staff will do everything possible to address the cause and to encourage the camper.
- If symptoms persist, the Director will call home to discuss options before you speak with your child.
- If all determine the best option is to pick up your child, we will have the camper ready. There are no refunds for campers who leave early since staff, food and gear are already secured.
